TWO DAYS CERTIFICATE COURSE ON BIOMEDICAL WASTE MANAGEMENT

18th & 19th May 2018

Introduction

Biomedical waste is any kind of waste containing infectious (or potentially infectious) materials. Biomedical waste is generated from biological and medical sources and activities, such as the diagnosis, prevention, or treatment of diseases. Common generators (or producers) of biomedical waste include hospitals, health clinics, nursing homes, emergency medical services, medical research laboratories, offices of physicians, dentists and veterinarians, home health care, and morgues or funeral homes. In healthcare facilities (i.e., hospitals, clinics, doctor's offices, veterinary hospitals and clinical laboratories), waste with these characteristics may alternatively be called medical or clinical waste. Medical facilities generate waste hazardous chemicals and radioactive materials. While such wastes are normally not infectious, they require proper disposal. Disposal of this waste is an environmental concern, as many medical wastes are classified as infectious or bio hazardous and could potentially lead to the spread of infectious disease. The most common danger for humans is the infection which also affects other living organisms in the region. Thus biomedical waste must be properly managed and disposed of to protect the environment, general public and workers, especially healthcare and sanitation workers who are at risk of exposure to biomedical waste as an occupational hazard.

Speaker: Dr.Soman Sushrut

FIRE SAFETY MANAGEMENT COURSE

16/06/2018

Introduction to the course

Each year in every country around the world there are serious fire incidents and people will die or seriously injured due to the fire or resulting smoke. A contributing factor will be the inability to find safe passage to exit the building. The best approach to fire safety is to prevent fires in the first place. Proactive fire safety management helps to achieve this. When these incidents occur, protected escape routes that unobstructed along with established and well practiced fire safety management and evacuation plans are proven to reduce the likelihood of injuries and their impact. Those in charge of buildings have a major role in understanding which fire safety measures are needed to comply with local building and fire safety codes. Proactive management is critical to ensuring that building users are aware of their responsibilities in applying those measures where relevant fire safety inspectors should ensure factory owners and users clearly understand their role in preventing fires and provide the means of proper guidance for occupants to safely evacuate a building in response to such an incident. The course covers these issues and starts with the principles of fire prevention.

How was the course organized?

This course were comprised of 2 modules.

Module 1 was about Fire Safety in Buildings and consists of 5 sections and 3 Virtual building visits.

5 sections were;

- (1) Fire prevention & Mitigation
- (2) Detection & Alarm
- (3) Evacuation routes
- (4) Separation zones – Compartmentation
- (5) Fire fighting – Building access and facilities
